

WILSON'S NOTE TO GERMANY DEMANDS STRICT ACCOUNTING FOR LOSS OF AMERICAN LIVES

DOCUMENT DRAFTED BY PRESIDENT INSISTS THAT FINANCIAL REPARATION BE MADE AND GUARANTEES GIVEN AGAINST REPETITION OF OFFENSES.

INTIMATES U. S. READY FOR ANY EVENTUALITY

Expressed in Emphatic Language Message Directed to German Government Expresses Unanimous Sentiment of Cabinet and Reflects Feeling of American People.

Washington, May 12.—The United States government in a note to Germany today formally demands of the imperial government a strict accounting on the loss of American lives in the sinking of the Lusitania and violation of American rights in the war zone. It also asks guarantees that there will be no repetition of such events or practices.

Language is Emphatic. With the plain intimation in it that the United States is prepared to meet any eventuality that may arise from non-compliance the communication is phrased in unmistakably emphatic language.

Written by President Wilson and approved unanimously by members of the cabinet, the note was being carefully examined by Consul Lansing and the law officers of the government at the state department today, to make sure that its phraseology covered every point of law involved. The White House officially announced that the president has finally determined the course of action to be pursued in the following statement issued by Secretary Tamm, after a conference with the president: "The course of the president has been determined. It will be announced just as soon as it is proper to publish the note now in preparation."

Addressed to Government. This was taken to mean that the American government observing the usual diplomatic amenities would await the receipt of the communication in Berlin before making it public. At first there was some suggestion that the communication be sent personally by the president to Emperor William, but Mr. Wilson declared that it should not be addressed to an individual but to the German government, and through it to the German people.

As for reparation, the United States naturally will seek financial reparation but its protest now is in the name of international law and to obtain a guarantee that such tragedies will not be repeated and lives of non-combatants sacrificed.

While high officials and cabinet officers were reticent to discuss its contents today, it was agreed the note reflected the intense feeling of the United States over occurrences in the war zone and wanted explanation of them as well as guarantee they would not be repeated.

Calls Attack Inhumane. The communication lays stress on the inhumanity in the attack without warning on merchant vessels. It refers in a general way every case in the war zone in which the rights of American citizens have been transgressed—the sinking of the steamer Paluba with the loss of Leon C. Cawshier, an attack by German aircraft on American ship Cushing, the torpedoing of the American steamer Kipling, and finally the destruction of the Lusitania with a loss of more than 100 non-combatants, more than 100 American lives.

The note while firm and pointed, does not abandon tones of friendship, leaving room for a denouement of her acts or an abatement of her processes. This is intimated in the suggestion that the German government and the German people certainly not have intended to sacrifice American lives in pursuit of their maritime warfare.

No Official Warning. Attention is called to the fact that the advertisements of warning appeared in the newspapers, the United States government was never officially informed of it, but irrespective of that the position is taken that the serving of notice to do an unlawful act neither makes it lawful.

The note calls on Germany for an explanation of her past and future conduct. Officers known as the advocates of vigorous steps in foreign affairs, were highly pleased. They said the president's note was the kind of a document that fulfilled the desire of every American and upheld the honor and dignity of the United States, indicating the government was prepared to go the full length of its ability.

More Discussion. As the day advanced and knowledge of the vigorous course the government was preparing to pursue became wide-

WILSON'S CONTENTIONS IN HIS NOTE TO BERLIN

It is stated on good authority that the following will be in substance the president's contention in his note to the German government:

The killing of Americans in the submarine attacks upon the Lusitania, the Paluba and the Gulf Light make it incumbent upon the United States to exact of Germany that "strict accountability" which the American government warned the Berlin government would be the consequence of a disregard of American rights under international law in the war zone.

The United States notifies Germany that it must agree at once to make full reparation for the death of Americans resulting from the German submarine warfare.

Germany to give without delay adequate guarantees that Americans henceforth shall be immune from harm from the submarine attacks when aboard either neutral or enemy passenger or other merchant vessels.

spread, officials began to shed more light on their plans. They indicated that the situation would grow only as serious as Germany chose to make it, and that the United States would stand on its legal right, taking successive steps to bring the imperial government to an understanding of the honest purpose of the United States for an abatement of the submarine warfare on non-combatants and reparation for offenses already committed.

One subsequent step being discussed today was that of conversation with other neutral governments to determine what steps they intend to take to protect their neutral rights. While the United States had traditionally been opposed to joint action, it often had acted identically with other governments.

AMERICANS IN PARIS VOICE INDIGNATION

Draft Resolution on Lusitania Tragedy Declaring "Act Places Responsibility Government Outside Humanity."

Paris, May 12.—More than 100 Americans in Paris have signed the following cablegram forwarded to President Wilson:

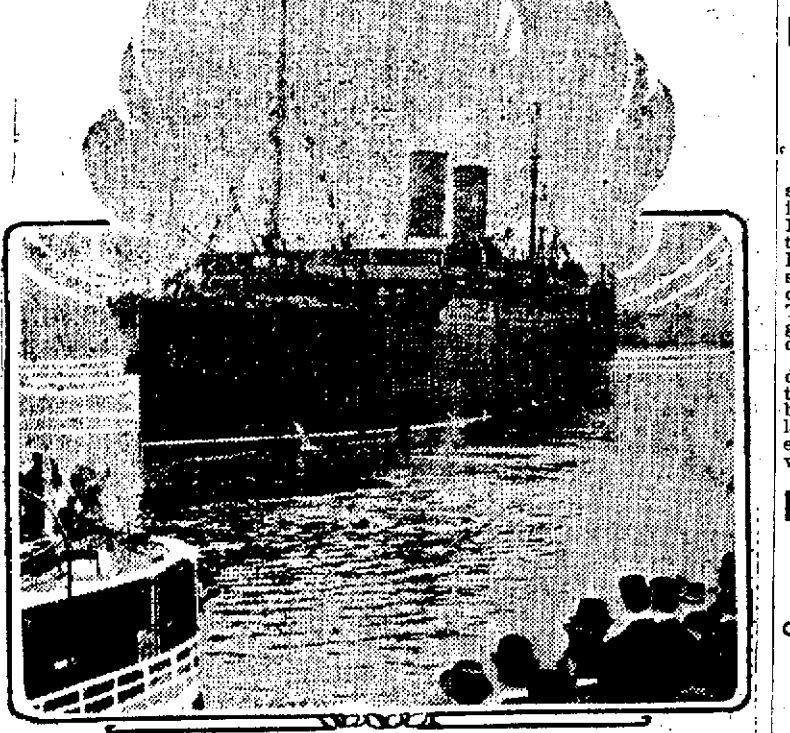

"We, the undersigned, who have observed strict neutrality, though living amid the horrors of war, now feel that in justice to our condition and in order to preserve our self respect, we must voice an indignant and energetic protest against the sinking of the Lusitania, an act predominant in savagery, and which places the responsible government outside of humanity."

Among the signers of the message are D. Edmund L. Groff, chief surgeon of American ambulance corps, in France; A. Platt Andrew, formerly assistant secretary of the United States treasury; N. Hutchins, American consul general to Roumania and Serbia; Lawrence V. Bennett, former president of American chamber of commerce in Paris; Captain Arthur Kipling of the American ambulance corps; F. Rolands, Wm. E. Iselin and Dr. Winchester Dubouché.

Resolution from Calcutta. Calcutta, India, May 12.—American residents of Calcutta adopted a resolution today expressing the opinion that the destruction of the Lusitania was "an act to be considered with horror and indignation by every honorable person."

"We express our firm conviction and belief that the American government will take prompt action toward securing the safety of the lives of Americans and other neutrals traveling on the high seas."

MORE CANADIAN TROOPS TO THE FRONT

Metagama leaving Montreal with 3,000 Canadian troops.

The Dominion's answer to the Canadian losses at Ypres, even as the heavy casualty lists were being published, was to hurry more troops to the front. The first part of the answer was seen when the palatial new liner Metagama, commandeered when she struck Montreal on her maiden voyage, left that city late last week crammed with troops for the firing line.

GERMANY NEAR END THROUGH A FAMINE DECLARES TRAVELER

Appleton Man Who Visited Germany Recently, Says Teutons Are Starving from Food Shortage.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Appleton, May 12.—The people of Germany are starving, according to George C. Sizerman, of this city, who no doubt has traveled through more of Europe than any Wisconsin man during the past sixteen years. He writes from London:

"I have been over to Petrograd, where everything is going on as usual. But that is more than I can say of Berlin. I was there last week, and intended to remain a week, but my bread gave out so I had to leave for London. When I left Copenhagen I carried my own supply of bread with me, and well it was that I did, for I would have had nothing to eat. It is absolutely rotten there and is getting worse. There is no use talking, you can't believe newspaper reports, but I can tell you the truth. They are starving there, but the censor is so strict that it is not allowed to go through the mail. To my mind, Germany has reached her limit and the beginning of the end is near. She knows she is whipped and sooner or later she will have to give in. The people, as a matter of course, are almost frantic and if they had their way, war would end within one hour."

COLONEL HIGH MOGUL IN NEW YORK STATE DURING PRESIDENCY

New York Republican Leader Swears Today He Considered President Head of Party.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Syracuse, May 12.—Elihu R. Brown, republican leader in the state senate, swore on the witness stand in supreme court today that he considered Theodore Roosevelt the head of the party in this state from 1906 to 1910. President Roosevelt was president of the United States during a part of that period.

The senator also swore that in 1911 when the state senate was deadlocked over selection of a United States senator to succeed Chauncey M. Depew, Mr. Roosevelt had expressed willingness to have the republican vote to an independent democrat who was unlikely to become identified with the dominant factor in the republican party.

Charles W. Hutchins Jr., a New York lawyer, declared on the witness stand that in July, 1914, Theodore Roosevelt had said that he agreed that the issues of 1912 were dead and he would "go after" President Wilson in his Pittsburgh speech and "tear him to pieces." Mr. Hutchins said that after what had happened in Chicago in 1912, the republican party was not big enough for both he and William Barnes.

WILSON WILL REVIEW THE ATLANTIC FLEET

Secretary Daniels States Today He Had Not Even Considered Abandoning Review on May 17th and 18th.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, May 12.—Secretary Daniels today told inquirers he had not even considered abandoning the review of the Atlantic fleet in New York. When last he talked with President Wilson, Mr. Daniels added the president had not changed his purpose to go to New York for the review on May 17th and 18th.

"Of course," said the secretary, "the president's attendance upon any function is always dependent upon the state of public affairs."

DRIFTING LIFE BOAT BEARS FIVE BODIES ACKLEY BILL GOES THROUGH IN SENATE

Remains of Three Women and Two Children Found in Lusitania Life Craft.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Queenstown, May 12.—A Lusitania life boat bearing the bodies of three women and two boys, which had been adrift since last Friday is reported ashore today near Baltimore, on the South Irish coast.

There were no American first cabin passengers among the seven dead brought into Queenstown this morning.

Report in London. London, May 12.—Lloyd has a report that a life boat of the Lusitania together with bodies of four women and two children was found yesterday seven miles off Fastnet. The boat was towed into Long Island Bay and the bodies taken by the coast guard to Skull, four miles from Cape Clear.

FRENCH ARE WEARING NEW GRAY GARMENTS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, May 12.—Dr. Henry Lyle, surgeon in chief of American hospital in France, conducted by Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, was a passenger on the Rochambeau which arrived today. Dr. Lyle says the French army was substituting garments of more subdued hue for the bright red trousers.

The new color is a sandy gray, which makes it more difficult to detect troops at a distance. The brilliant red of the French soldier's trousers make him a splendid target for the enemy's snipers, and by this is shown by the fact that a large preponderance of the men treated at our hospital were suffering from wounds in the legs and abdomen.

NEW RIOTS REPORTED

Feeling Against Alien Enemies Resident in London Arouses Mob to Acts of Violence.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, May 12.—Anti-German riots in the east end of London were renewed this morning with even more violence than yesterday. Wherever a German showed himself, he was attacked. The police force has been so thinned by drafts sent to the army, it had difficulty in dealing with the angry crowd.

Raid German Shops. A number of German establishments were raided and sacked, and the contents scattered over the streets. The Germans themselves were forced to go into hiding. The police in some cases were defied by angry crowd, and some officers were injured. Their endeavor to protect the Teutons. The furniture of German houses and stores were hurled through windows to the streets. One German was thrown into a horse cart, and the remainder of his companions had been spending their time drowning women and children. He was only saved from a similar fate by the intervention of the police.

There were several instances of Germans trying to escape in their cars. They went racing down the streets in a mad gallop, and their vehicles were smashed.

Jewesses Ask Protection. A number of Russian Jewesses were fleeing from a mob, and a police station in east end and pleaded for protection explaining they were being mistaken for Germans.

Riots in the east end of London have been going on since August last from an average of 16 cents to 18 cents a pound, while the retail price has increased from 22 to 26 cents a pound. The price of potatoes, which cost 10 cents a pound, now fetches 18 1/2 cents a pound, while the retail butcher's price has risen in the same time from 13 to 18 cents a pound.

Potatoes form one of the products of which Holland always possesses a surplus, and the question of their profitable export is important in consideration. A large part of the cultivated land in Holland is planted with them, the total extent being about 400,000 acres. The crop of potatoes in the north provinces. The quantity of the crop produced annually is about 2,400,000 tons, valued at about $28,000,000. About 720,000 tons of this quantity is exported to other countries, for which since the war began there has been an enormous demand from Germany. There was also a greater demand for potatoes in Holland itself.

Belgian refugees and also the export of potatoes for cattle feed instead of oilcake, which had become high in price, and the question of a shortage of potatoes was a danger of a short crop of potatoes in the country in consequence of the increased exports and the Minister of Agriculture for a time prohibited their export, but the municipalities in order to keep sufficient stock for emergencies. Several of the larger cities bought up stocks at the same time, but the municipalities are now finding they are not sufficient for the potatoes are still on their hands and some of them are rotting.

The exports in the first seven months of the year reached a total of 370,000 tons or only 43,000 tons less than in the entire year of 1913, while the export of potato flour amounted from November 1914 till March 1915 to over 78,000 tons or nearly 44,000 tons in excess of the export in the same period of 1913-1914. The high prices paid by Germany made the local price mount and the government found it self compelled to fix a maximum price for retail selling, and the working classes had begun to feel the pinch. Cabbages and other green vegetables have also become more expensive because Germany has been calling for more and more imports of the garden produce. The truck gardeners are naturally making good profits and the Dutch consumers find themselves compelled to pay more for their vegetables. The truck farmers, however, are making strong opposition to a proposal to regulate or prohibit exports of these products, which they declare would ruin their business. They argue that the sale of their produce to foreigners brings money into Holland which otherwise could not reach this country and many other nations would be deprived of the hard times brought about by the war. Meantime the Dutch housewife is compelled to pay more for her food and her increased expenses.

Charge Intimidation of Witnesses in Recent Contest Over Estate of James Campbell.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] St. Louis, May 12.—The grand jury here today began its investigation of the estate of James Campbell, $18,000,000 will contest suit which last week was settled in favor of the defendants. Mrs. Campbell, the widow, and Mrs. Lois Campbell Burkhman, the daughter, were the contestants. The investigation was asked by L. E. Ottofy, attorney for the contestants, whose suit failed. Ottofy charged the defense with coercing and intimidating witnesses for the plaintiff. Among the witnesses summoned by the grand jury today was Mrs. Hattie N. Reed, who in turn testified for both sides.

The trial involved only the parentage of Mrs. Burkhman, who was the daughter of Mrs. Campbell and the plaintiff Mrs. Reed said she was not certain that the defendant was the Mrs. Campbell whom she attended. The will was contested by several persons, and nephew of Mr. Campbell. The jury decided Mrs. Burkhman was the daughter of Mr. Campbell, and the court then dismissed the entire case, thereby confirming Mrs. Campbell and Mrs. Burkhman's right to the entire estate during their lives.

HOLLAND SUFFERS FROM HIGH PRICES OF FOOD ARTICLES

Rush of Dutch Producers to Take Advantage of Increased Demand Has Worked Hardships on Nation.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] The Hague, May 12.—Holland is now suffering from high food prices, the result of various causes, chief of which was the rush of Dutch producers at the beginning of the war to take advantage of the increased demand from abroad and the consequently augmented rates offered by foreign buyers.

Retail prices of a number of articles of consumption have risen in ever-increasing ratio ever since the outbreak of hostilities. Statistics covering 27 articles have been compiled and these show that, figuring the average cost at 100 during the past twenty years, the prices have now risen by 30 per cent. Prices, however, had started going up some time before the war. In fact, since 1907 they have been rising steadily and they are still going up.

Meat, especially pork, has gone up considerably in price. Part of this increase is due to the rise in codfish, herring and oysters, but much of it is due to the fact that the passing over the frontier into Germany of live animals, whose further export, however, has been forbidden. Meat also has been exported in large quantities. Germany taking in February this year alone about 8,750,000 pounds of pork and Great Britain 5,500,000 pounds from Holland. The export of first quality beef, live weight, has been about 1,000,000 pounds last from an average of 16 cents to 18 cents a pound, while the retail price has increased from 22 to 26 cents a pound. The price of potatoes, which cost 10 cents a pound, now fetches 18 1/2 cents a pound, while the retail butcher's price has risen in the same time from 13 to 18 cents a pound.

OPPOSE A LIMIT ON LENGTH OF TRAINS

Railroad Representatives Argue Against Bill Which Would Limit Trains to Half a Mile.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.] Madison, Wis., May 12.—The representatives of the state appearing before the senate committee on corporations yesterday afternoon in opposition to the Staudenmayer bill to limit the lengths of trains, called half a mile, Messrs. Merz and J. B. Pratt, representing the railroad employees, favored the enactment of the law. They said that shorter trains would be equipped with full crew and that there would be fewer accidents.

P. C. Eldridge of the Milwaukee road said that the call of the people was for lower freight rates. He declared that the railroads had improved their rolling stock, and that their grades so that long trainloads could be hauled. He pointed out that if the railroads are to be limited in the length of trains all of their preparations for large economies in the hauling of freight would be blasted. Similar arguments were made by E. B. Nash of the Northwestern line and E. C. Forney of the "So." No action was taken by the committee on the bill.

RUSH REINFORCEMENTS

Germans Recognize Importance of Allied Attack and Send Additional Forces From Lens and Douai.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, May 12.—The progress of the allies' offensive in Flanders and northern France has given rise to the hope here that one of the really momentous phases of the war is in process of a solution which would be regarded as favorable from the British point of view. Berlin recognized the importance of the new turn of events, German newspapers emphasize in large headlines, the beginning of the new Anglo-French offensive.

German reinforcements rushed from Lens and Douai thus far apparently have failed to check the dash of troops which are sweeping northward from Arras to attack important German positions. The German war of attrition, which has been going on since the beginning of the war, has been broken through. The British field marshal says nothing of the part British troops are taking in the offensive in the direction of Lille.

The situation on the huge eastern battlefield is still obscure, but it is evident that the gains are not all at the expense of the Russians. The official reports from Petrograd and Berlin are divergent, however, that military experts are loath to commit themselves.

French Admit a Loss. Paris, May 12.—The French war office this afternoon issued the following statement:

"In the section to the north of Arras we have maintained our gains excepting in front of Loos, where a night counter attack resulted in taking from us a part of the terrain we captured in the day time."

"On the rest of the front yesterday, saw artillery engagements."

AMERICA CAN POINT THE WAY TO PEACE

United States Can Lead in Calling International Congress Says John Hayes Hammond.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Cleveland, May 12.—The convening of the World Court congress here this afternoon for a three days session is at the "psychological moment," according to officers of the congress. The part America as a neutral will play in the congress will be important, says John Hayes Hammond, chairman. "If the United States, as the mutual friend of the warring nations, is able to point the way to an effective international course of justice, there is every reason to believe the belligerents will be willing to accept it."

The object of this congress is, first, to arouse the American public to consciousness of the possibilities of such a tribunal; second, to develop an insistent demand for it. The time is ripe.

If preliminary plans are carried out the congress will take no steps that will gain for it the name of "peace congress." The Lusitania incident will be ignored and means for ending the war will not be discussed.

Plans for development of an international court will receive the whole attention of the speakers, who include former President Taft, John Mitchell and many other nationally prominent men. Today's program included noon luncheon, a reception and afternoon and evening sessions.

The Manufacturer's Advertising

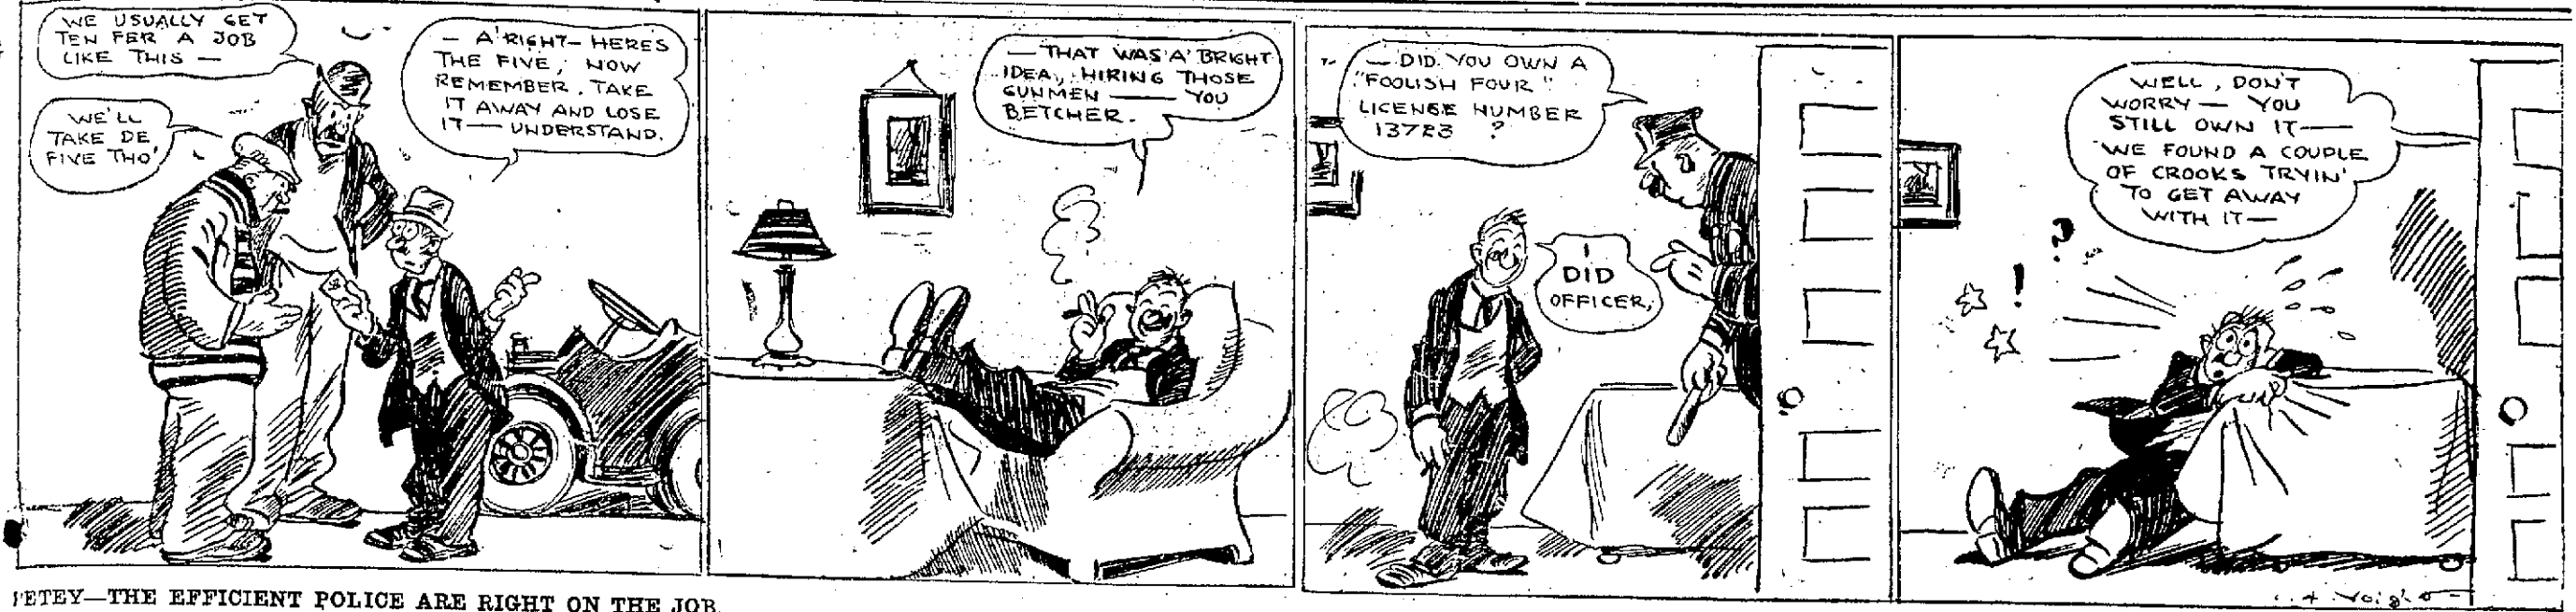

A clever advertising man once characterized certain forms of national advertising as THROWING MONEY AT THE MASSES.

He pointed out that in their efforts to spread out, these national advertisers were getting everywhere in general and nowhere in particular.

Manufacturers and distributors are coming more and more to see that the easy road to sales is through the advertising columns of the daily newspapers.

Newspaper advertising hits the spot which it aims at. It costs less and produces more, and it automatically gets the enthusiasm and co-operation of the local dealer.

Manufacturers seeking information about newspapers are invited to address the Bureau of Advertising, American Newspaper Publishers Association, World Building, New York.

K. O. BROWN HAS A SHADE ON "FIGHTING BILLY" MURRAY

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Kenosha, May 12.—George (K. O.) Brown and "Fighting Billy" Murray fought ten rounds head to head, last night, and at the end of the last round, Brown had a popular verdict to his credit. The match showed two big middleweights, who fought in rough tactics in a slam-bang affair, which Brown had an edge in the third, eighth and ninth rounds. Mike Snyder, whom Chicago considered as a coming lightweight, received his first setback when knocked out by Red Watson, the rugged western lightweight, in six rounds. Snyder kept Watson away from him until the third, when he got careless, and Red bumped the Chicago boy for the count of four. The fourth and fifth were fairly even and Snyder received the fatal punch in the sixth, with a crashing blow to the jaw.

SOX LOSE OPENER WITH WASHINGTON, SCORE 2 TO 0

Chicago, May 12.—Washington defeated the Chicago White Sox in the opening game by the score of 2 to 0, the Sox being helpless to deal with Pitcher Shaw in the pinches. In five innings the Sox put men on the bases, but were unable to drive home the tallies through weak stick work. Jim Shaw went the route for Griffith's club and came through with flying colors. The scores came when Moran drove a run home in the fourth on a double with Milan on the sack. Morher hit a home run when Fourmy tried to halt the feeling Senator at third. Scott and Benz pitched for the Sox. Daly caught, as Schalk has been suspended for trouble with the umpire.

Cubs Win.
Brooklyn, May 12.—Pierce, Chicago National pitcher, went the full route against the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Cubs took the game 5 to 1. Pierce's southpaw curves had the Dodgers baffled while Nap Rucker yielded four teen safe swats during his stay on the mound. Jimmy Archer caught and celebrated his return to the game with three hits.

Roland continues to win for Detroit. The Tigers' pitching sensation has helped Jennings' team get its good start.

The expectation is that later on Portland people will buy Hugh Vail's interest in the club and that Lord will be installed as manager.

Manager Pants Rowland of the White Sox figures that having too many rules for behavior makes liars out of ball players. Therefore he has established only two such regulations for the White Sox—no cigarettes and go to bed by 11:30. "And that 11:30 rule isn't ironclad," said Rowland. "All I ask is that the boys are out any place they shall tell me beforehand. Then if any talebearer comes to me and thinks he's telling me something about a player I can tell him, 'Sure, I knew it beforehand. I told him it was all right to go there.'"

George Tebeau is fighting the Feds in Kansas City with a free gate on conflicting dates. On opening day for the Kansas City association team, ticket purchasers were given passes to another game. On each pass was a choice of two dates on which the ticket might be used. On both these dates the K. C. Feds will be at home. The A. A. magnates have sanctioned Tebeau's free gate scheme. It is said.

Here's a new departure in rowing—paying an admission to see a boat race. How can it be done? Read on: "Announcement has just been made that three visiting crews will compete with Yale eights in the annual spring regatta May 8, and it will be held on Lake Whitney for the first time in years. The lake is backed by a high fence and admission will be by ticket only, the first time Yale crew authorities have ever been in a position to get gate money from spectators. The course will be 1 1/2 miles."

The White Sox to a man believe that they'll win the pennant this year. There isn't a member of the club that doesn't think the Sox are the strongest club in the league, and Rowland encourages this kind of sentiment. "I want the boys to have all the confidence in the world," remarked "Pants." "For, with them thinking that way, they are sure to play better ball. They're taking a lot of chances, and sometimes they don't get away with them, but as a rule, they are getting the breaks."

Giving the subject calm consideration, it would appear that anybody on a team which has just had a player caught by the hidden ball trick would rather stay out of sight on the bench than fare forth to kick.

Fred Merkle is hopeful of being back in the game in two weeks, but his injured arm is still much swollen. "Not as bad as when I was first hurt, though," says the first baseman, "for then it was a shapeless mass."

This Pair Will Do Some Fancy Driving

DARIUS RESTA

BOB BURMAN

Darius Resta, winner of the recent Vanderbilt and Grand Prize races at San Francisco, and Bob Burman, the world's speed king, are expected to do some fine and fancy driving when they take to the field in the next Indianapolis 500-mile race with their blue Peugeot cars. They entered only after they had been assured that they could be on the same team together, having formed a hard and fast friendship on the coast, where Burman loaned Resta certain necessary spare parts without which he could not have achieved his Vanderbilt and Grand Prize successes. Working together, they will be a hard pair to beat.

Manager McGraw (top right), President Tener and Benny Kauff.

By signing Benny Kauff, known as "the Ty Cobb of the Federal league," Manager McGraw of the Giants has brought on a merry war. Kauff originally belonged to the Indianapolis American Association club. He jumped to the Indianapolis Feds last year. From there he went to the Brookfords, and from the Brookfords he attempted to hurdle back to organized ball. President Tener says Kauff cannot play again in the National league, at least within three years.

BROTHER CLAIMS DRIVER BERGDOLL IS SPEED CRAZY.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Philadelphia, May 12.—Grover C. Bergdoll, entrant of three Bergdoll cars in the next Indianapolis 500-mile race, is defendant in a suit to test his sanity brought by Charles A. Bergdoll, a brother, who says Grover's mind has been affected by his mania for speed. Mrs. Emma C. Bergdoll, widow of a wealthy Philadelphia brewer, and mother of both men, says she will spend her last cent helping Grover prove he is O. K.

Among the trifling things which have happened to the Glants this spring besides the official jolt in the jaw over the Kauff episode and being hurled into the cellar are: George Burns, sprained ankle; Bill Ritter, typhoid fever; Fred Merkle, dislocated elbow; Fred Snodgrass, smashed hand; Poll Perritt, broken nose. It never rains; it's a cloudburst.

AT MYERS THEATRE.
The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, which is soon to be heard here, occupied a position in the forefront of the great orchestras of this country, many of the leading critics of New York and other cities placing it next to the Boston Symphony Orchestra. Its conductor, Emil Oberhoff, is recognized as one of the greatest living orchestra conductors, and has built the Minneapolis organization up from its beginning. The membership of the orchestra is not made up from Minneapolis musicians, the players having been recruited almost entirely from the leading symphony orchestras and musical centers of the world, brought to Minneapolis in most cases under long contract. The ample guarantee fund subscribed by the people of Minneapolis has enabled Mr. Oberhoff and the management to engage many of the finest artists to be found anywhere, and the personnel of the orchestra, in point of artistic ability, compares favorably with that of the Boston or any other orchestra. The Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra is now completing its twelfth year. This famous orchestra will appear at Myers Theatre Sunday, May 16, matinee only.

The sale of seats at Myers Theatre box office for the engagement of the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra will open tomorrow morning at 9 a. m.

Cause of Ocean Tides.
The chief cause of ocean tides is the attraction of the moon which, affecting most strongly the side of the earth nearest to the moon, draws or heaps up the waters in the parts of the earth successively turned toward the moon. The attraction of the earth for the water on its surface is strong enough to counteract the attraction of the moon and hold the water in place, but it responds to the attraction of the moon by considerable movement.

Clothes Parisian Dogs.
In Paris there is a dog's tailor who does a large business. The tailor is a lady and in her reception rooms are fashion books containing designs of the dog jackets in various colors and materials from cloth to chamol and sealskin.

It's a mighty short way to pipe-joy

if you go via Prince Albert—tobacco that answers every question any man can hand out! You can jam it in your old jimmy pipe or roll it into a makin's cigarette and it will produce more real and true happiness than any brand at any price you ever bucked up against. Now, let's all get together, and repeat slowly and distinctly:

PRINCE ALBERT

can't bite your tongue, and can't parch your throat, because it is made by a patented process that removes the bite and the parch. No other tobacco ever was or can be made like P. A. And P. A. tastes as good as that sounds!

So the warm tip is: Get the jimmy pipes out of dark corners, out of the rafters, where you've hidden them for fear of more tongue bites. Get 'em out and fire up with P. A., for you can go to it fancy-free from sun-up right down the line to the pillow-period!

And the sooner you know this little thing personally, the more joy 'us you'll be.

Prince Albert is sold everywhere in tippy red bags, 5c; tidy red tins, 10c; pound and half-pound tin humidors—and that classy pound crystal-glass humidor with sponge-moistener top that just beats the band for keeping P. A. fine like silk. You buy one quick.

ITALY AND THE WAR.

There is something disintegrating to international morality about war on a grand scale. Questions of right and wrong are ignored, and it is accepted as a matter of course "that he shall take who has the power, and he shall keep what he takes." Upon what grounds could Italy justify intervention in this war, on either side?
Every new belligerent adds to the complications of international business. But Italy really has no grievance. She has been for many years a member of the Triple Alliance. But Bismarck, the last German statesman with anything like vision, saw clearly enough that she would never antagonize the British navy. She would, indeed, be the most vulnerable member of the alliance, with her exposed coast line; and in fighting against France and England would be likely to occupy the unenviable position which has been forced upon Belgium.
It is true that a part of the Province of Trent and the Austrian ports on the Adriatic have a preponderant Italian population. But this is a situation in which Italy has acquiesced since 1869. Is there no statute of limitations in such matters? Her title to these provinces is only theoretically better than that of Frederick the Great to Silesia. His claim was more than a century old. It was, as all historians admit, devoid of moral excuse. Only success made it tolerable when, as Macaulay says, "all Europe in arms had failed to tear Silesia from that iron grasp."
But what tolerable excuse could Italy offer for an attack upon Austria at this time? Is the dreadful example of Belgium to extend to the whole world? Does might really make right? Where is this new international standard of honor to end? On our own established and inherited theories of national responsibility, the state is, if anything, more bound by the laws of morality than the individual. As a necessary consequence of that true freedom which we call government by consent of the governed, the state represents the conscience of all its people.
There are evidently sound and sober statesmen in Italy. They have so far kept their people out of the dreadful conflict now in progress. Would the small accession of territory, and the possession of Adriatic ports calculated to circumscribe the access of the growing Slav peoples to the sea be worth the frightful cost of war? The price is something more than human lives and the savings of the people. It is the sacrifice of a standard of national honor of the last importance to the future of Italy, or any other nation.

DON'T GET EXCITED.
If there was ever a time when the American people should keep cool and not lose their heads, that time is now. The destruction of the Lusitania, and the loss of life resulting, shocked us as a nation, more than anything which has occurred since the war broke out, and we denounced the dastardly deed with righteous indignation, but there are always two sides to a question and both should be considered.
The passengers on the ill-fated ship had ample warning of the risk incurred. It was admitted without question. This warning was signed by the German embassy and published in many of the leading papers.
The Lusitania was a blockade runner, loaded with munitions of war for Germany's most deadly enemy, and turned loose to run the blockade without escort or convoy. The captain of the boat knew that he was in the danger zone and yet the passengers did not provide themselves with life preservers, and after the attack, there was time for many of them to secure one. The only wonder is that so many people were saved.

England has something to answer for, in the way of negligence and responsibility, and sober second thought will hold her accountable. She treated the blockade as a joke, and called it a paper blockade. In fact, ever since the war broke out, England has failed to recognize the gravity of the situation, and her people have been kept in ignorance through the most established system of censorship ever established.

The argument is advanced that Germany had no right to establish a blockade in the world's great waterway, but she has established it. Might is recognized as right, in many things that would not stand the test of righteousness in times of peace.
The destruction of the Lusitania and her cargo of freight would be of little moment but for the wholesale murder of human cargo without warning, and with no opportunity to escape. This is what has aroused the world's indignation. Money does not pay for this kind of a loss.
The German blockade along the coast of Ireland is a part of the great battlefield, and will continue to be until removed by Great Britain. It is only five hundred miles away from our shores, and when we enter it we take the same chances that we would in crossing any other battlefield in the war zone.

Questions of diplomacy and international law are not receiving very much attention just now, and are not likely to until sanity takes the place of passion and hatred, now so largely in control. America has kept out of the turmoil, and if wise, will continue to do so.

STAND BY WILSON.

Former President Taft again urges the public to stand by the president in the present crisis. In a speech at Philadelphia last evening he showed the same cool, deliberate judgment he evinced when first informed of the disaster to the Lusitania, and said in part:

"Under our constitution the president conducts our foreign affairs until congress finds it necessary to declare war. Upon him is the acute responsibility in such a crisis. If he were to yield to the cry of extremists and summon congress to take extreme measures, he would have great influence with congress under such a provocation. Indeed, the impulse to such action has usually been stronger with congress than with the executive."
"Now it may be that a series of acts of inhumanity and violations of the laws of war to our national detriment and against our citizens may force us on and lead our people to believe that whatever the cost, no other course is open to us."

"But we must bear in mind that if we have a war it is the people who must pay with lives and money the cost of it, and therefore they should not be hurried into the sacrifice until it is clear that they wish it and know what they are doing when they wish it."

"It may be necessary that for a hundred lives and the method of their taking we should lose thousands and hundreds of thousands of lives. The national honor and interests may ultimately demand it, but time for serious thought and clearly weighing the consequences will not be wanting. The justice of our cause or the opportunity to vindicate it, and this the president may be counted on to secure."
How different the attitude of this man from that of another ex-president who would rush into strife and tread where angels fear to go. Compare the two men and then decide with Taft to stand by the president.

With Whitford in the speaker's chair, Winegar chairman of an important assembly committee, Horrington of Walworth county chairman of the taxation and a member of the investigating committee, and Cunningham in the senate his interests of this particular senatorial district are being fought for. All four are making names for themselves, showing the wisdom of the voters in their selection.

The state legislature is certainly going in for reform. First it passes an anti-tipping law, then it passes an anti-treating law. The latter, however, has a provision that a man may treat his wife or some relative. What a lot of cousins of his own and his wife he will find when he wishes to evade the provisions and buy a drink for the house?

The school children are now counting the days until vacation and the opening of the playgrounds. This important adjunct to city life is one that is the delight of the younger generation and a comfort to the parents who know their children are safe when on the school grounds.

When summer arrives it usually makes itself felt at least for the first few days. Then we settle down and before long wish it were a bit cooler. Meanwhile make the most of the beautiful days that come to us now and let the future take care of itself.

Governor Philipp is not behind time in sending his expression of support to President Wilson along with other republican and democratic state administrative officials. This is not a time for politics, but for united and concerted action.

The decided improvement that the additional street lights installed on what were hitherto dark corners, proves the worth of the plan and should be endorsed by the citizens generally.

SNAP SHOTS

It is the man who has a job who is offered a better one. The fact that he is out of work too often is regarded as prima facie evidence that he deserves to be.

It is said women have no inventive genius. The Gaston girls invented a bachelor uncle worth a million dollars and the town gave them a patent on him.

A farmer's idea of entertainment is to watch a town man milk a cow.

A good cook is one who uses plenty of butter.

The most widely read and thoroughly informed man in our town is Charlie Fosdyck, who, although a graduate of Harvard, never had a job nor earned a dollar in his life.

Examine the average man's score and you will find he stubbed it the year he was defeated for office.

A man knows less than a woman, but a part of what he knows is true.

The best way to convince a man is to menace his pocketbook. The best way to convince a woman is to excite her emotions.

Next to the doctor, the man who doesn't pay his bills prefers to beat the grocer.

An entertaining woman is one who permits a man to talk about himself.

For Neighbor Jones has come
And walked off with my rake.

I know that Summer's near.
There is no doubt at all;
Smith has come for my mower—
He'll bring it back next fall.

The balmy season's on.
Hot weather soon will start;
The folks down street have come
And got our baby cart.

We cannot be far wrong.
We know what springtime means;
Three neighbors came at once

The Hickeyville Clarion.
Trains on our railroads hesitate at this village only on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays, the mail being thrown off permissively. Sometimes the mail bag hits our town and sometimes it lands seven miles out in the county, depending on the speed of the train. Our station agent, who was out filling the switch lights with red oil the other night picked up a Purdyville mail bag which had rolled clear down from that town in the wake of a train a week or so before and hadn't been missed.

Office News.
We are likely to be a big family in this office—everybody scrambling for the wishbone. We have a wonderful tool-and-screwdriver and an esprit de corps that is unequalled. We all love our publisher on pay day. As John Cowper Powys might say: "There is a unanimity of purpose which savors of the completeness of the infinite." To quote the esteemed Statespost, nothing mumps but bricks. Ask our red-headed bookkeeper.

Our telephonist has been suffering from tonsillitis and her hello apparatus disseminates a slightly foreign accent. But we are glad to hear from you just the same. If you hear a voice that sounds like a Ford going up hill, you will know that it is her or she, as the case may be.

FRANK IS INNOCENT, SAYS CRIMINOLOGIST

Rev. John S. Wilder.

Rev. John S. Wilder of Savannah, Ga., one of the best known criminologists in the south, makes an earnest appeal for commutation to life imprisonment for Leo Frank, the Atlanta pencil factory superintendent under sentence of death for the murder of Mary Phagan, whose case, after having gone through every court in the land, is soon to be presented to the prison commission of Georgia. Mr. Wilder, after having made a careful study of the case, declares his belief that Frank is innocent.

RECOVERS FAMILY HEIRLOOM

Man Also Gets Apprenticeship Papers of Grandfather Binding Him to Temperance.

Santa Fe, N. M.—Supt. J. H. Wagner of the public schools of this city has just come into possession of interesting heirlooms—that had passed out of his family, but which he re-located in eastern Indiana, where they had been taken from Lancaster county, Penn. They include an old-fashioned walnut chest, made over a hundred years ago, when each piece of furniture represented the work of an individual craftsman, instead of being a mere collection of pieces made by machinery and assembled in a warehouse; a colonial walnut bureau and other pieces of furniture.
In one of the bureaus was found an old indenture of apprenticeship, binding out Mr. Wagner's grandfather as a millwright apprentice. Contrary to prevailing opinion, there were pronounced temperance ideas in those days, for the indenture bound young Wagner to keep away from public taverns and gambling places.
These heirlooms had been sold at public auction years ago, but were recovered through the agency of friends. The walnut chest still has upon it shipping instructions via the old Erie and Maumee canals, in the days before the railroads.

ARE INVESTIGATING

GIRL FORGER'S CASE

Agnes Bumgart Remains at County Farm Until Decision What To Do Is Reached.

Agnes Bumgart, the Detroit girl forger, who was arrested here on Friday last after securing cash on a forty dollar check at a local bank and on Saturday, on her plea of guilty, sentenced to one year in Waupun, has not been taken to the prison yet and is at the County Farm, in charge of the superintendent for the time being until a final decision is reached as to what to do in the case.

On Monday morning last, at ten o'clock, Judge Maxfield suspended the year's sentence, that is, set it aside, for the time being, continued the case for one week and William H. Dougherty was appointed as special attorney to make an investigation of the girl's past life and report to the court on Monday next.

No bail was fixed and the girl was sent to the county farm at the request of the district attorney. It appears that she refused to return to the county jail for reasons which she told the authorities and which appeared sufficient to cause an investigation of jail conditions, according to officials who will discuss the subject. It is stated that District Attorney Dougherty will take the matter up when he returns from Chicago where he has been called on business.

In the meantime Attorney Dougherty is making his investigation as to the past history of the girl in Detroit. "There is no doubt but what this girl has punishment coming," stated asked what disposition was to be made of her case. "Even she herself realizes that she must pay the penalty but she is entitled to a 'square' deal while she is in Waupun. If she is besieged by the detective agency on warrants for other offenses, it appears to be an injustice that a continuing prosecution follow her for a number of years in the class of a habitual criminal and there is a legitimate reason why she was not committed to the county jail."

DISCUSS BOARD PLAN FOR STATE PRINTING

Possibility of Cutting Down Printing Bill Is Seen Under Proposed Plan.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., May 12.—The merits and demerits of bills for the creation of a new state printing board were argued for three hours before the assembly committee on printing yesterday afternoon. The principal bill under discussion was a measure presented by Assemblyman Pieper, which would create a new state printing board composed of the state treasurer, attorney general and secretary of state with the superintendent of public state property as an ex-officio member. Appearing in favor of this measure were Secretary of State John S. Donald, George S. Post and H. J. Anderson, the latter two employees of the present state printing board.

Secretary Donald said that he believed that three of the constitutional officers should be members of the board. He had no objection to the governor being a member, but said he was a very busy man and might not be able to give the attention required. Mr. Anderson analyzed the present board and said that it was not making a material reduction in the reports of the state departments must be curtailed. He declared that the bill introduced by Mr. Pieper would save the state about $27,000 annually. Mr. Post told of the improvement that was being made in the printing and the prices and said that as the result of recent changes in schedules and contracts, $30,000 to $50,000 would be saved on the same work, in the same amount printed on the same grade of paper. He advocated, however, that printing contracts be awarded for two years, instead of one year.

In opposing the Pieper bill and favoring the measure recommended by the investigating committee, Senator Whitman said that the bill would not have the effect of reducing the cost of printing. He said the central ideal of the bill recommended by the investigating committee was that there was to be a state editor who would be to the job all of the time. The governor and the superintendent of public property would also be members of the board. He said that he considered the board created by the investigating committee bill superior in many respects to the Pieper bill. He said that the governor was responsible to the people and should be a member of the board. He thought the superintendent of public property should be a member, because he was the custodian of the state property and there should be an editor to cut down the size of the reports. Assemblyman B. L. Van Gorder opposed the Pieper bill and said that the enactment of the bill would save the state many thousands of dollars.

SELLS LIQUOR TO INDIAN; ON TRIAL

Friendly Case Starts in Green Bay Court, When Bar-keeper Says He Did Not Discobey Any Laws.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Green Bay, May 12.—In order to test the constitutionality of the law which prohibits the sale of liquor to Indians, a friendly case was instituted in municipal court this morning. A local saloonkeeper is charged with the sale of liquor to Cornelius Wheelock, an Oneida Indian. The case is started at the request of Superintendent J. C. Hart of the government school and the Oneida reservation who was notified several months ago by the bureau of Indian affairs at Washington, to prosecute saloonkeepers who sold liquor to the Indians. The saloonkeepers say the law does not prohibit them from selling liquor to civilized Indians, or an Indian not a member of a tribe. They claim practically all of the Oneidas are civilized and that the tribal features have disappeared.

HAS TRADE SCHOOL FOR MEN

Great Britain Fits Grown-Ups for Jobs Which Require Skilled Labor.

London.—One of the most interesting employment experiments in England is a trade training school for men, enabling them to shift from a trade temporarily stagnant owing to the war, into one where skilled labor is urgently needed. The experiment is being carried out by the Prince of Wales Relief fund, and it is successful may be indefinitely extended.

Furniture trade was one of those adversely affected by the war, and a large number of skilled furniture workers have since become skilled leather workers, on military equipment.

The school was opened December 7, last. In the first five weeks of its existence it enrolled 139 men, 84 of whom already have "graduated" and obtained employment as leather stitchers.

More than half of the men placed have been more than forty years old, and the report of the first five weeks' work in the school says men more than forty, "and indeed over fifty," are as quick and adaptable as the younger men.

DODGED SCHOOL, MADE 'FILE'

Country Boy Returns Home After Few Weeks' Absence Driving a Racing Car.

Hutchinson, Kan.—Henry Koehn, a country boy from Galva, McPherson county, was sent to Hutchinson a few weeks ago by his father to get an education in a business college. His father gave him $250 and good advice. "Now, Henry, be careful," his father advised. "This will be enough money. You can't have extras." Henry came back home, driving a 1915 model racing roadster. He wore a tailor-made suit and a diamond ring. Also he had in his pocket a bank book showing that he had $2,500 or more on deposit in a bank.

A few days after his arrival in Hutchinson with his $250, he fell in with a friend of his father, a grain man. Henry was tempted. He invested his $250 in wheat. Usually it pans out the other way. In Henry's case it didn't. Some say he cleaned up as much as $7,000. Henry is not going to school.

DOINGS OF THE VAN LOONS—There's Nothing At All the Matter With Their Eyesight—

PIMPLES AND ERUPTIONS
MEAN BAD BLOOD

People who have impure or impoverished blood should be careful to take only a vegetable and temperance remedy such as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is and has been for over 40 years.

The first day you start to take this reliable medicine, impure germs and accumulations begin to separate in the blood and are then expelled through the eliminative organs.

In place of the impurities, the arteries and veins gradually get fresh, purified blood and the action of this and blood on the skin means that pimples, boils, carbuncles, eczema, rash, acne and all skin blemishes will disappear. Then you must remember that when the blood is right, the liver, stomach, bowels and kidneys become healthy, active and vigorous and you will have no more trouble with indigestion, backache, headache and constipation.

Get Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery to-day at any medicine dealer: it is a powerful blood purifier, so penetrating that it even gets at the impure deposits in the joints and carries them out of the system.

Depend upon this grand remedy to give you the kind of blood that makes the skin clear, the mind alert, the vision keener and puts ambition and energy into the entire body. You won't be disappointed. For free advice or free booklet on blood, write Dr. V. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.—Advertisement.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets not only the original but the best Little Liver Pills, first put out over 40 years ago, by old Dr. R. V. Pierce, have been much imitated but never equalled, as thousands attest. They're purely vegetable, being made up of concentrated and refined medicinal principles, extracted from the roots of American plants. Do not gripe. One or two for stomach corrective, three or four for cathartic. Advertisement.

How Thin People
Can Put On Flesh

A New Discovery

Thin men and women—that big, hearty, filling dinner you ate last night. What became of all the fat-producing nourishment it contained? You haven't gained in weight one ounce. That food passed from your body like unburned coal through an open grate. The material was there, but your food didn't work and stick, and the plain truth is you hardly get enough nourishment from your meals to pay for the cost of cooking. This is true of thin folks the world over. Your nutritive organs, your functions of assimilation, are sadly out of gear and need reconstruction.

Get out the foolish foods and funny, wasteful diets. Omit the flesh cream, sugary. Cut out everything but the meals you are eating now and eat with every one of those single Sargol tablets. In two weeks note the difference. Five to eight good solid pounds of healthy, "stay there," fat should be the net result. Sargol charges your weak, stagnant blood with millions of fresh new red blood corpuscles—gives the blood the carrying power to deliver every ounce of life-making material in your food to every part of your body. Sargol, too, mixes with your food and prepares it for the blood in easily assimilated form. Thin people gain all the way from 10 to 25 pounds a month while taking Sargol, and the new flash stays put. Sargol tablets are a scientific combination of six of the best flesh-producing elements known to chemistry. They come 40 tablets to a package, are pleasant harmless and inexpensive, all druggists in Janeville and vicinity sell them subject to an absolute guarantee of weight increase or money back. A FOOL
AND HIS MONEY

By GEORGE BARR
M'CUTCHEON,
Author of "Granstark," "Truxton King," Etc.

Copyright, 1915, by George Barr M'CUTCHEON.

"Thank heaven!" cried Elsie devoutly.

"The poor fellow is almost distracted. Really, Mr. Smart, we planned this little visit here simply in order to take him out of himself for a while. It has been such a tragedy for him. He worshipped the child." It was Mrs. Billy who spoke.

"And the mother made way with him?" I queried, resorting to a suddenly acquired cunning.

"It is a girl," said Elsie in a loud whisper—"the loveliest girl. The mother appeared in Vienna about three weeks or a month ago and—whiff!—off goes the child. Abducted—kidnaped! And the court had granted him the custody of the child. That's what makes it so terrible. If she is caught anywhere in Europe—well, I don't know what may happen to her. It is just silly acts as this that make American girls the laughingstocks of the whole world."

By this time I had myself pretty well in hand.

"I daresay the mother loved the child, which ought to condone one among her multitude of sins. I take it, of course, that she was entirely to blame for everything that happened."

"They at once proceeded to tear the poor little mother to shreds, delicately and with finesse, to be sure, but none the less completely."

"What was her social standing in New York?" I inquired.

"Oh, good enough," said Betty Billy. "She was in the smartest set, if that is a recommendation."

To my disgust the three of them refused to enlighten me further as to the history, identity or character of either Mr. or Mrs. Pless, but of course I knew that I was entertaining under my roof by the most extraordinary coincidence the Count and Countess of Something-or-other, who were at war, and the child they were fighting for with motives of an entirely opposite nature.

"What time do we dine?" asked Mr. Pless later, with a suppressed yawn.

"At 8," said Elsie promptly.

"I think I'll take a nap," said he, with a languid smile and a little daunt of his hand as if dismissing us, he moved languidly off, but stopped after a few steps to say to me, "We'll explore the castle tomorrow, Mr. Smart. If it's just the same to you." He spoke with a very slight accent and in a peculiarly attractive manner. There was charm to the man, I was bound to admit. "I know Schloss Rothboffen very well. It is an old stamping ground of mine."

"Indeed!" said I, affecting surprise.

"I spent a very joyous season here not so many years ago. Hohendahl is a bosom friend."

I was eager to steal away to the east wing with the news, so somewhat later I knocked at the countess's door. I realized that it was a most unseasonable hour for calling on a young, beautiful and unprotected lady, but the exigencies of the moment lent moral support to my invasion.

The countess' French maid peered out at me.

"Tell your mistress that I must see her at once."

"Madame is not at home, m'sieur," said the young woman.

"Not at home?" I gasped. "Where is she?"

"Madame has gone to bed."

"Oh!" I said blinking. "Then she is at home. Present my compliments and ask her to get up. Something very expediting has happened."

"Madame has requested me to inform m'sieur that she knows the count is here and will be so good as to call tomorrow morning."

"What! She knows he's here? Who brought the information?"

"The bountiful Max, m'sieur. He brings it with dejeuner, again with dinner and but now with the hot water, m'sieur."

"Oh, I see!" said I profoundly. "In that case I shan't disturb her." Very stiffly and ceremoniously I advised caution for the next twelve hours and left.

Now it may occur to you that any self-respecting gentleman in possession of a castle and a staff of common sense would have set about to find out the true names of the guests beneath his roof. But it so happens that I rather enjoyed the mystery. The situation was unique, the comedy most exhilarating. Of course there was a tragic side to the whole matter, but now that I was in for it, why minimize the novelty by adopting arbitrary measures? Somewhat gleefully I decided that it would be good fun to keep myself in the dark as long as possible.

When I reached the room where my guests were assembled I found Mr. Pless and the Baron Umovitch engaged in an acrimonious dispute over a question of bridge etiquette. The former had resented a sharp criticism coming from the latter, and they were waging a verbal battle in what I took to be five or six different tongues, none of which appeared to bear the slightest relationship to the English language. Suddenly Mr. Pless threw his cards down and left the table without a word of apology to the two ladies, who looked more hurt than apalled.

He said he was going to bed, but I noticed that he took himself off in the direction of the moonlit loggia. We were still discussing his defection in subdued tones—with the exception of the irate baron—when he re-entered the room.

"Are there real spirits in your castle, Mr. Smart, or have you flesh and blood mediums here who roam about in white night dresses to study the moods of the moon from the dizziest ramparts?"

I started. What indiscretion had the countess been up to?

"I don't quite understand you, Mr. Pless," I said, with a politely blank stare.

"My dear countess," said I the next morning, "while I am willing to admit that all you say is true, there still remains the unhappy fact that you were very near to upsetting everything last night. Mr. Pless saw you quite plainly. The moon was very full, you'll remember. Fortunately he was too far away from your window to recognize you. Think how easy it might be!"

"But I've told you twice that I held my hand over Pinkie's nose, and he just couldn't bark, Mr. Smart. You are really most unreasonable about it. The dog had to have a breath of fresh air."

"Why not send him up to the top of the tower and let him run around on the roof?"

"Oh, there's no use talking about it any longer," she said wearily. "It is all over, and no real harm was done. I am awfully sorry if they made it uncomfortable for you."

"And now will you be good enough to tell me who I am?" she asked after a few minutes. "That is, who am I supposed to be?"

"Oh," said I uneasily, "you are really nobody! You are Britton's wife."

"What! Does Britton know it?"

"Yes," said I, with a wry smile. "He took a mean advantage of me in the presence of George Hazard not an hour ago and asked for a raise in wages on account of his wife's illness. It seems that you are an invalid."

"I hope he hasn't forgotten the baby in his calculations."

"He hasn't, you may be sure. He has named the baby after me."

"How original!"

"I thought I rather clever to change Rosemary's sex for a few days," said I.

"And now tell me all about Mr. Pless," she said. "How is he looking? Does he appear to be unhappy? There was a curious note in her voice, as of anxiety or eagerness, it was hard to tell which.

"He appears to be somewhat sentimental and preoccupied. He gazes at the moon and bites his nails."

"I wish I could have a peep at him some time without being!"

"For heaven's sake, don't even consider such a thing!" I cried in alarm.

"Just a little peek, Mr. Smart," she pleaded.

"No!" said I firmly.

"Very well," she said resignedly, fixing me with hurt eyes. "I'm sorry to be such a bother to you."

"I believe you'll go back to him after all," I said angrily. "Women are all alike. They—"

"Just because I want to see how unhappy he is and enjoy myself a little you say horrid things to me!" she cried almost pathetically. "You treat me very badly."

"There is a great deal at stake," said I. "The peril is—well, it's enormous. I am having my own time heading off a scheme they've got for exploring the entire castle. Your husband's ex-husband says he knows of a secret door opening into this part of the—"

CHAPTER XI.

I Resort to Diplomacy.

THE countess sprang to her feet with a sharp cry of alarm.

"Heavens, I—I forgot about that! There is a secret panel, and—heaven save us—it opens directly into my bedroom!" Her eyes were very wide and full of consternation. She gripped my arm. "Come! Be quick! We must pile something against it or nail it up or do something!"

She fairly dragged me out into the corridor and then, picking up her dainty skirts, pattered down the rickety stairs at so swift a pace that I had some difficulty in keeping her pink figure in sight. Why is it that a woman can go downstairs so much faster than a man? I've never been able to explain it.

At last we came to the broad hall at the top of the main staircase. Almost directly in front of us loomed the great padlocked doors leading to the other wing. Passing them like the wind, she led the way to the farthestmost end of the hall. Light from the big paneless windows overlooking the river came streaming into the vast corridor, and I could see doors ahead to the right and the left of us.

"Your bedroom?" I managed to gasp, uttering a belated question that should have been asked five or six nights higher up at a time when I was better qualified to voice it. "What the dickens is it doing down here?"

She did not reply, but, turning to the left, she opened a door and disappeared.

I Put My Shoulder to the Huge Creaky Bed and Shoved.

ed into the room beyond." I followed ruthlessly, but stopped just over the threshold to catch my breath in astonishment.

I was in "my lady's bedchamber." The immense Gothic bed stood on its dais, imposing in its isolation. Three or four very modern innovation trunks looked like minarets against the opposite walls half open. Some of my most precious rugs adorned the floor, but the windows were absolutely undraped.

"Don't stand there gaping!" she cried in a shrill whisper. "This is the mirror, the middle one. It opens by means of a spring. There is a small hole in the wall behind it, and then there is still another secret door beyond that, a thick iron one with the sixth Baron Rothboffen's portrait on the outer side of it. The canvas swings open. We must—"

I was beginning to get my bearings. "The sixth baron? Old Ludwig the Red?"

"The very one."

"Then how do you know he is in my study? You don't mean to say—"

"Please don't stop to talk!" she cried impatiently, looking about in a distracted manner. "But for goodness sake get something to put against this mirror!"

My mind worked rapidly. The only object in the room heavy enough to serve as a barricade was the bed, and it was too heavy for me to move, I feared.

I suggested it, of course, involuntarily lowering my voice to a conspiratorial whisper.

"Pull it over, quick!" she commanded promptly.

"Perhaps I'd better run out and get Max and Ru?"

"If my husband or Mr. Pless should open that secret door from the other side, Mr. Smart, it will be very embarrassing for you and me. Let—"

I put my shoulder to the huge creaky bed and shoved. There were no casters. It did not budge. The countess assisted me by putting the tips of her small fingers against one end of it and pushing. It was not what one would call a frantic effort on her part, but it served to make me exert myself to the utmost.

"Don't do that!" I protested. "I can manage it alone, thank you."

I secured a strong grip on the bottom of the thing and heaved manfully.

"You might let me help!" she cried, firmly grasping a side piece with both hands.

A cyclone is not such a bad thing, after all," remarked the portly salesman as he settled himself comfortably in his chair. "One saved five dollars for me once."

"Er—how about your sample cases?" faltered an awed listener.

"Oh," suavely replied the salesman, "the cyclone landed them just ahead of me, and had my goods all spread out on display when I got there."

Jessie Chatterton went away from home to attend a select seminary, with the craze among the girls to diversify their names. She therefore wrote a letter to her brother at home, signing herself "Jessica." Bill detected the signs of the times, and replied as follows:

Dear Sister Jessica:

Your letter received. Aunt Annica and Uncle Johnnie start in her Boston this morning. Motherica and Fatherica are both well.

Your affectionate brother, BILLICA.

As the operator had informed her, Jerry was not at home. Duster in hand, she started to inspect her lover's work, stopping before one picture in genuine admiration of his cleverness. At last she came to the nearly completed portrait of Elant Vernon, manifestly the woman in he told her that there was a woman whose valy she needed to watch. And as it was that other instance her woman's intuition was correct, for here was the character who was nearly to be the cause of the separating of the lovers and the ruin of the engagement for which Kit, at least, was making such a decided sacrifice of self. Just as she was contemplating the beautiful features of this "other woman," there came a quick step at the door and Gerald Cameron walked in, fresh from a walk with the "other one."

Kit's heart was metaphorically speaking in her boots. She hardly dared to breathe for fear Jerry would recognize her; and yet she was hoping against hope that he would. Here, in her presence was the man she had learned to love best in all the world, but she could not rush into his arms, much as she wished to; she could not give away her disguise as she did the next best thing—she began to fuss. "Where's the regular Jerry today?"

Jerry monochromatically brushed her aside, removed his hat and gloves; and after the usual preparations began work at his easel. In vain did Jerry make any impression upon the youth. Flourishes of luster and loud noise in moving the furniture about failed in their purpose. Kit's make-up was so complete that no one would have recognized her—not even her best best friends—not to mention Jerry.

Bumped Into Him

Finally she fairly bumped into him in her effort to attract his attention. Thinking her officious Jerry brusquely pushed her from him, exclaimed: "Where's the regular Jerry today?"

"She has the mumps," said Kit, making a face and disguising her voice.

"Humph," said Jerry indifferently, and resumed his work.

Now even if the matter of a "slavery" having mumps is a matter of slight concern to a man whose reputation is rapidly gaining international proportions, the fact that the substitute "slavery" was any particular young woman that she happened to be was of all importance, at least to Kit. One moment she could not understand his indifference. The next she had to admit to herself that if Jerry had taken any more notice than he did of anyone whose he thought to be a servant, he would not have been the man she believed him to be. And it was in this way that this dilemma, and perplexity of thought as to what to do next that Jerry settled the matter by rudely asking her to leave the studio.

Sadder But No Wiser

Kit returned to her guardian's home and put down and then—womanlike—cried.

It has not been explained by psychology to the complete satisfaction of the world why it is that when a woman cries she is better off than when she is not. Some have contended that she "lets off steam," so to speak, in the process. But that as it may, Kit conceived what she believed to be a very good idea, right while the tears were flowing freely. Jerry, she thought to herself, did not recognize her because she was dressed as a "slavery," but, furthermore, he did not pay any attention to her because she was not good looking as a servant.

Pine thought. If she could not stay near her lover as a "slavery," perhaps she could let it stand as a model. Now for the telephone book. By this time her eyes were dried; further, they were sparkling with the anticipation of a new risk she was going to run to visit the man of her heart.

Kit, spending the long nights in her guardian's library with a book and in company with her favorite pomegranate, contented herself for a while—tried to imagine that she was happy in her self-delusion, and knew in her heart that she was not. Separation is a hard thing for a woman. Her long hours of waiting were usually spent in thinking. The man has a much less hard time of it, for there are diversions for him that the woman does not have.

Mr. Standish, seeing his ward's sadness, determined to try to brighten her up with occasional visits to the theatre or to some entertainment where she would meet people and have her mind somewhat occupied. When a woman's mind is true to a man, as a rule she does not want diversion, except it be in his company. So it was with Kit. She was able to change her environment, but eventually she did. Just before this, however, she had picked up her book—rescued from the school, which happened to be the case. Separation was killing her, so she devised a plan whereby she could see Jack.

Kit was struck with the idea. Why not raise Jerry suspiciously even to get a better than this killing suspense. But how to get to the studio unnoticed by the world; more important yet, how to see Jerry without his seeing and recognizing her—that was the question.

Just the Same Kit

You will remember that this was the same Kit at heart who was not stunned by the climbing of trees or any obstacle which would lead her to her present design—so you can imagine that with her as with everyone, the old adage held true that where there's a will there's a way—and Kit found the way. Dressing herself in an old coat, hiding her beautiful face with a veil and an old hat, and carefully concealing her absence from the house she surreptitiously crept out of the front door, hailed a taxi and sped to the studio apartment building where her lover was supposed to be.

At the switchboard of the apartment building she inquired: "Is Mr. Cameron in?"

"No," said the operator nonchalantly, thinking, perhaps, that this was a poor model seeking employment. "No, he's not in," he added. "At least, I think he isn't. I'll phone up and see."

When his back was turned, Kit—never acting in haste—hastened up the stairs all by herself, met a slavery at the top, offered her maid to let the young heiress adopt her rags, accomplished the change in a jiffy, and almost before she knew it Kit Bradley had tremendously but nevertheless bravely entered the apartment of her lover.

WOMEN'S CLUBS AND THEIR ACTIVITIES

(EDITED BY MRS. ABBIE HELMS.)

THE RELATION OF THE AMERICAN WOMAN TO THE PRESENT WAR

(Dr. Arnold B. Hall.)

Noted educator of the University of Wisconsin, gives his views on the subject to the women of the District Federation of Women's Clubs at Beloit on April 28th.

Dr. Hall began his lecture by asserting that "the present war is the greatest tragedy in history, that woman has to pay most of the cost of the war and that woman will have a large voice in the final adjustment of difficulties leading to peace. Woman has the interest to which appeals the reconstruction of society which will make the tragedies of the past and the paradoxes of the present impossible," he asserted.

New Appeal Intellectual.

He recalled how the peace movement started about 100 years ago and how its first real appeal was to religious instincts and its second, to humanitarianism. Now, he went on, the intellectual says that war is unchristian and inhuman, but that it is necessary; and hence we must unite on a new platform for peace which must be not only soundly emotional, but eminently intellectual.

He defined three bases of the modern movement for world-peace as the propositions that man is a rational animal; that, when freed from the slavery of a militaristic patriotism, man does not want war; that, in the long run, man can control his passions as far as human things are concerned. Then he assailed the arguments upon which war is justified at present.

"There is a philosophy which contends that war is needed to produce a world manhood," Dr. Hall said, "but think of the inhuman deeds that soldiers of all wars have committed. War makes not a man but a monster; not a human being, but a beast of prey! It is argued that large armies and navies are necessary to preserve peace. But this theory of competitive armaments makes war inevitable for the nations tried to preserve peace by fighting to secure peace. I do not come before you women with an impracticable appeal for immediate disarmament, but I want to call you to demand that our nation, with one hand upon its defense, consecrate its right hand to the work of international peace."

"Trade Wars Are Futile."

As to the matter of commercial expansion, France created a colony in Tunis and began her effort to foster commerce with it, yet French trade with Tunis cannot compare with French commerce with Canada, where not one cent has been spent for colonization. Spain has poured millions of dollars into the thousands of lives into South America, yet today Germany has 100 times as much trade with Latin America as Spain. In 1912, German commerce expanded 200 per cent without an acre of territorial aggrandizement at the point of the gun.

Dr. Lyman Abbott, last Wednesday at the University of Chicago, said that war is righteous and Christian. If that is so, then I am through with Christianity. For I cannot believe in a God, in a system of theology nor in a dynamic social force which declares that inevitably moral questions must be settled by force!

"Well then, if war is abolished, what will become of patriotism? We are asked, And I ask in return, What of the preventable industrial diseases and accidents which claim thousands of lives in our country every year? Is there no chivalry for that cause? Is there no need of patriotism there?"

Call for Woman's Nobility.

"What we need is to establish a society among the nations which will restrain as does society among men. I want the women of America to urge that the United States be the first world power to sponsor that world society. May you go back to your homes and spheres of influence determined to explode the fallacies of militarism, determined to use your magnificent potentiality to spread this intellectual message and to educate for the new platform of peace! That is the responsibility of you intellectual women of Wisconsin. By so doing you will bring to vitality the idea that every man is his brother's keeper. And only through that process can we hope for a true peace on earth, good will toward men!"

Dr. Hall's address moved his audience. Applause broke out only once or twice, but the effect of the speech was profound.

GARBAGE DISPOSAL PLANT: JANEVILLE NEEDS ONE

Why cannot it be incorporated into the new building to be erected at the water works plant?

When received the invitation of your president to come to this convention and tell you about our incinerating plant, naturally I went to our city office for accurate information. It was a pleasure to see how anxious they all were to tell about it and the pride they took in it—from mayor to street commissioner.

Monroe, so far as we know, is the smallest city in the United States that has a municipal garbage disposal plant. It has a population of about 4,500 people and is situated in the heart of a magnificent dairy country. The municipal care of garbage had been, for many years, a matter of make shift, those housekeepers not disposing of their own garbage for its disposal, having to find a dumping place, that our cans might be emptied. In this way, use was made of old cellars to be filled, of abandoned quarries not more than three blocks from our public square and almost within a stone's throw of some of our best homes. This last nuisance was so great that, in 1911, our city board of health, by resolution, stopped the city from dumping garbage anywhere within the city limits. Outside dairy farmers refused to sell ground for dumping purposes. In the language of the street, it was not only up to the council, but the council was against it. Here was a problem that had to be solved and that at once.

It happened that someone had seen an advertisement of the McGuire Incinerator, built and installed by C. E. Hunter, company of Chicago. Our city fathers decided to investigate incinerators. They found that the McGuire Incinerator is always in operation under a positive guarantee to do all that is claimed for it before a dollar is paid; that it is guaranteed to be not only cheap, but the cheapest on the market; that it is simple and not easily gotten out of repair; that it needs no expert operator; that one unit is adequate for a city of 10,000, and that it is absolutely fireproof. A trip of inspection was made to Springfield, Ill., where the city was operating several units of the McGuire Incinerator seven days in the week. At that time, the council decided that this was the only incinerator within the means of a small city; that it was not only cheap but safe; and that it did all that was claimed for it.

Originally, the McGuire Incinerator was installed in the open, with no covering whatever; then with only a canvas cover, and now with a permanent structure. Our council, feeling that we should have a more permanent protection, in the spring of 1914 installed one unit of the McGuire Incinerator in a building 30 feet wide, 40 feet long and 12 feet high, with flexible roof—flexible is a composition shingle of asphalt, sand, etc. and is fireproof. The completed plant cost about $4,000. This is $1,000 less than the present regular price, because the Hunter company has been permitted to use ours as an exhibition plant, and it has been visited and inspected by committees from cities far and wide.

The floors of this building are of concrete with sewer drains and city water connections. On each long side of the building are large doors with earth approaches, much like the bank barns of the Green county farmer. In the centre of the upper floor is the opening to the overliek furnace below. This opening has a large cover, made of iron and fire brick, which is raised and lowered by a chain pulley running on a track attached to the ceiling. Such a structure of one hundred cubic yards capacity, and equipped with covers and dumping device, is driven into the building on one side, emptied by the driver without leaving his seat, and driven out at the other. Outside of the exit door is a concrete platform also fitted with sewer drain. Here the emptied wagon tank is thoroughly washed with hose and each day's burning, the floors of the building are also thoroughly washed. A recent visit from Mr. Hunter brought from him high praise for the perfect condition of order and neatness in which our plant is kept.

In the basement are bins for fuel, lavatory, etc. for the operator, and of course the furnace which destroys the garbage. The furnace is about eighteen feet long by twelve feet wide. It is constructed of an outer wall of common brick and an inner wall of fire brick with an air chamber between. The top is dome shaped and in the center is the opening for the reception of garbage. At the front of the furnace, the fire grate and draft are in the right hand corner, while the chimney, only 28 feet high, rises from the left hand corner. There are doors for the removal of ashes and clinkers, and to poke up the burning garbage. The shape of the furnace is such that the smoke and hot gases are drawn over the garbage on their way to the chimney, drying it and setting it on fire within fifteen minutes. Burning the garbage thus from the top consumes all fumes and gases before they reach the chimney and makes good the claim of the inventor that the McGuire Incinerator is absolutely odorless.

This incinerator is capable of destroying nine tons of garbage and waste every twenty-four hours of continuous operation. Such garbage collected from hotels, restaurants, dwellings, stores, schools, houses, slaughter houses, alleys, and all dead animals; also night soil collected from privies and closets. Our plant is operated twice a week at a cost of about 25c for each ton of garbage consumed. It takes 200 pounds of soft coal to destroy each ton of garbage. If the plant were in continuous operation, the cost would be about 25c less, as the fuel used in heating the furnace would then be applied directly to the destruction of garbage, actually 110 to 120 pounds. As to the housewife, for garbage removal is 50c a month. She had to provide herself with a metal garbage can, and unless she kept it under lock and key, it was regularly taken care of without further thought on her part. About one hundred households patronized the garbage wagon last year, but as this is largely a matter of education, it is anticipated that the number will constantly and steadily increase.

The present ordinance governing the collection of garbage is considered inadequate and some amendments will doubtless be made. It is proposed to prohibit the placing in street garbage cans of any bottles, cans or other receptacles in which gasolene or other explosives have been used. It is also contemplated that the householder shall be required to drain the garbage into a waste paper. This not only reduces the amount of moisture to be evaporated, but the paper serves as fuel, thus materially reducing the cost of operation. Such regulations are in force in Racine.

In Monroe, we have demonstrated that a modern garbage disposal plant is entirely feasible and practical. It is an economy. Our council is the one investment of public money that has been absolutely without popular criticism. We have a cleaner city. The garbage collector gathers up what is largely a nuisance, and we are cleaner than ever before, and best of all we have less flies.

Club Happenings

W. C. T. U. MEETING.

The W. C. T. U. held its mothers' meeting Wednesday, May 11th, at three p. m., at the home of Mrs. A. Hubbard, 228 South Jackson street. There was a good attendance. Devotional were read by Mrs. A. Olson. Roll call was responded with quotations for and regarding mothers. Following this Rev. Ellen Copp gave a short talk on her new book on Common Law. It is a splendid book and profitable for anyone to study. The program was in charge of Mrs. J. C. Roberts. The topic was "Mothers of the Bible." Mrs. Roberts read an article on Mother Eve, the mother of all. This was followed by a series of articles on the mother of Moses, read by Miss Welch, Deborah, the mother of Israel, read by Mrs. Loudon; Ruth, the ancestral mother, read by Mrs. Olson, and Mary, the mother of our Savior, read by Mrs. Palmer. This was followed by a live discussion of the moving picture "The Mother of Jesus," and the pictures. After this the meeting adjourned after a very profitable afternoon.

Caroline M. Palmer, Pressa Supt.

O. E. S. STUDY CLASS.

The Star Study Class met at the home of Mrs. Joan Sherer on Mineral Point avenue on Thursday, May 6th. Mrs. E. O. Kimberley was joint hostess with Mrs. Sherer. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Eddy, the past president, Mrs. Theodore Garbutt, presided. After the roll call and usual business was transacted a committee was appointed to draft resolutions of condolence on the death of a recent member, Mrs. Wiener. The delegate to the District Federation, Mrs. C. V. Kerch, gave a very interesting report of the program of that event. Mrs. Kerch announced as a guest before the club and outlined a plan to secure a new municipal rest room. The club passed resolutions heartily endorsing the project. Mrs. Pearl Holsapple gave a review of a new book she had just been reading. It was "Personality Plus," by Edna Ferber, and the story proved very interesting in the telling. Delicious refreshments were served in the dining room, which was very prettily decorated. The next meeting is the election of officers.

ART LEAGUE.

The club met in the library on Friday, May 7th. Mrs. Woods presiding. After the regular order of business was gone through with, the reports of the delegates to the District Federation were called for. Mrs. Nuzum, Miss Goodwin and others gave interesting talks. Before the program was taken up, Mrs. Woods announced a gift to the league of the beautiful painting by Laham, then hanging on the wall. A vote of thanks to the donor of the picture was passed and ordered placed on the books. The committee on resolutions reported and read the resolutions they had prepared on the death of two members of the club, Mrs. Osgood and Mrs. Best. A few moments were then given to Mrs. Helms, who outlined a plan for a new municipal rest room. The club voted to endorse the project, both as a club and individually. The program was then taken up by Mrs. Thorne as leader, the topic being the Romanesque Architecture in Germany. She said that she was unable to find anything about Saint Godehard Cathedral, so she changed her subject to the church at Mainz. Mrs. Wild described the Spyr Cathedral and Mrs. Helms the Mainz Cathedral. At Worms, Miss Matilda Bailey gave the Church of the Apostles at Cologne. The next meeting is the election of officers and a social to be held at the home of Mrs. Pember on May 21st.

PHILOMATHIAN CLUB.

This club met with Mrs. P. Taylor on Saturday, May 8th. After the routine business was gone through with there was a report from the delegate, Mrs. Munn, on the recent Architecture meeting in Beloit. Mrs. Helms outlined a plan for a new municipal rest room, which was enthusiastically endorsed by the club. A committee, consisting of Mrs. Kerch, Mrs. Helms and Mrs. Helms, is in view of furthering the project. A paper postponed from a previous meeting on the explorations of the South Pole, was taken up by Mrs. Jenkins. A paper on Whitney, Fulton and Elias Howe, prepared by Mrs. Gibbons, was read by the president, Mrs. Capelle. Also a paper on Alex. Graham Bell, read by Mrs. Helms. The meeting was a very profitable one and will be held with Mrs. Capelle a week later.

TWENTIETH CENTURY CLASS.

The annual meeting of the Twentieth Century class will meet on Saturday afternoon, May 15th, with Mrs. Victor P. Richardson of St. Lawrence avenue at half after two. A tea will be served at 5 o'clock.

THE McDOWELL CLUB.

A fine program of high class music has been prepared by this club for their free public concert at the Congregational church on Monday, May 17th. It is needless to say that their appearance will be greeted with a large and appreciative audience.

THE CIVIC COUNCIL.

The regular meeting of the Civic Council will be held in the city hall on Monday evening, with the president, Mr. Krotz, presiding. After the routine business, reports were given by the various committees. A final report from the rest room committee was rendered, showing a balance on hand of about $95. A motion was carried that the two rest rooms at the high school be thoroughly cleaned and the balance of the fund be turned over to whatever allied plan the club was trying to carry out. A committee appointed to see if some city ordinance could be passed regarding the serving of liquor in cafes and public restaurants, reported that no headway had been made as yet toward such an ordinance. The chairman, Miss Mout, of a committee to confer with the restaurants in regard to the serving of liquor, reported that all have three agreed to not serve liquor in their places of business. A discussion was held as to whether it would be advisable to place placards in the windows of those places not serving liquor, announcing the fact to the public, that they might know whom they cared to patronize. Further time was asked by this committee. The outline of a municipal rest room to be established in the public library, was given by Mrs. Helms, who appeared before the club for that purpose. After a spirited discussion the council voted to endorse this project, and the president was empowered to name a committee of three to serve for this purpose during the summer months.

Edgerton News

JITNEY SERVICE PLANNED FOR EDGERTON CITIZENS

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Edgerton, May 12.—Plans to cover territory not covered by any street car company and routes outside of the city, are being planned by James Whittey of this city. Definite arrangements as to the routes have not been made, but it is possible that people living on the outskirts of the city who have a long way to go for meals during the working hours will now have the benefit of riding.

Mr. Whittey promised that if the patronage demands it he will establish routes which will cover the entire city. The first jitney bus was started last Saturday afternoon with no particular route or schedule, with the idea of testing the popularity of the project. Indications pointed to the good future patronage on a regular basis.

The Five Hundred club met at the home of Mrs. Albert Rader on Albion street yesterday afternoon. Mrs. F. W. Cook won the prize.

A large number of the sophomore girls of the high school made a short hike yesterday afternoon to Albion, where they were received by the Albion Academy girls and served light refreshments. They returned home late last evening.

The Eastern Star lodge met in the Masonic hall last evening and held their regular business meeting, after which the following program was rendered: Reading by Mrs. Carrier and a piano duet by Miss Fannie Comery and Mrs. H. Maas. After the program light refreshments were served.

Better Qualities-Better Styles-Greater Assortments In The Golden Eagle's First May Sale of Undermuslins Now In Progress

The opening day of the May Sale of Undermuslins fully justified the Golden Eagle policy to aim for higher qualities, more distinctiveness in styles, better workmanship—without increasing the prices usually associated with ordinary every-day sort-of-merchandise. The unfortunately familiar practice of skimping materials and cheapening workmanship, in order to quote "bargain" prices—finds no place in The Golden Eagle scheme of things. This is a Confidence-and-Economy Sale—with emphasis on the confidence. So then you will find here—Center Aisle—every good material and every new and good style in wonderful variety—at a very substantial saving.

In the sale will be found Night Gowns, Combinations, Drawers, Chemise, Corset Covers, Night Robes, Bodices, Negligees, Petticoats, etc.

AMI FRENCH UNDERWEAR—Your particular attention is directed to the unusual showing of Ami French Underwear, which so closely resembles the genuine hand-made French Underwear that it is impossible for the average person to detect the difference; price is much less than the genuine French Hand-made Underwear.

Question:—I want to the drug store to purchase copper sulphate for Bordeaux for spraying fruit trees and was told they were using coppers for spraying. Is that all right for Bordeaux?

Answer:—Coppers is sulphate of iron and is used for spraying weeds, especially dandelions. It is not used for Bordeaux. That requires copper sulphate.

Question:—What shall I do for a nest of worms found in apple tree? It consists of a large web with worms inside.

Answer:—This is undoubtedly the nest of the orchard tent caterpillar. Unlike other caterpillars sometimes found on apple trees this one appears early in the season, while the others are found during late summer or early fall. There are two remedies for this insect that may be used now. One is to burn out the tents. This should be done early in the morning or late in the evening, for during the day the worms are out feeding on the foliage. A corn cob soaked in kerosene makes a convenient torch at the end of a long pole.

Question:—What shall be done to prevent wormy apples?

Answer:—This question has been answered repeatedly in these columns. Spray with paris green or arsenate of lead. For particulars see Gazette of May 5 and May 7th.

Question:—Can we have milk tested at the high school?

Answer:—Yes. Send two ounce sample and the test will be made.

GERMAN FIRMS PUBLISH PAPERS ON A WAR EVENTS ABOUT FORMER EMPLOYEES.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Bremen, May 12.—For many months it has been the practice of firms in various parts of Germany—manufacturing concerns, banks and big stores—to issue miniature newspapers which contain the war news concerning their employees in the field.

One of the most successful of these experiments is conducted by a large coffee concern in Bremen, more than half of whose employees are away, and many of whom have distinguished themselves for bravery. The papers, which are issued weekly, not only go to the employees who remain behind, and to the families of those

Rules and Regulations For Boys' Acre Contest

- Age not over 20 years on June 1st, 1915.
 - Corn must be grown in Rock County by boys who are residents of the county. Each contestant (except in case of young members who may hire heavy work) must do all the work of preparing the ground, planting and cultivating an acre plot, which may be in a field alone, or may be a portion of a larger field. He may have help in his work.
 - If plot is in a large field of corn a pencil and paper sketch of the field with plot located should be made on the back of the record blank.
 - Before husking the plot, or acre, must be measured by the local supervisor. The Commercial Club Committee is to be free to remeasure the acre if they so desire.
 - A complete and accurate record of the crop should be kept by the contestant in note book kept for the purpose, and when complete, copied onto blank which accompanies these rules. These blanks properly filled out and signed by the local representative, should be mailed to the Secretary of the Commercial Club one week before the day on which the prizes are to be awarded.
 - Entries must be sent to the office of the secretary of the Commercial Club on or before June 1st, 1915.
 - The seed recommended to be used is Silver King (Wis. No. 7), Golden Glow (Wis. No. 12), Murdock or Reid's Yellow Dent.
 - The husking must be done under the supervision of the local supervisor to be named by the Janesville Commercial Club. No corn will be credited that is not fully matured and has not been husked under the supervision of these officials.
 - Seventy-five pounds of ear corn shall constitute a bushel, the corn to be weighed at the time of husking in the presence of the local representative who signs this report.
 - The best ten ears should be brought (or sent) to the office of the Secretary of the Janesville Commercial Club one week before the awarding of prizes which date will be announced later. These ears will remain the property of grower and will be returned to him. The Commercial Club however reserves the right to exhibit them in other corn shows.

How Newspapers Aided Merchant Make a Fortune

Newspaper Advertising Boosts Yearly Furniture Sales to $500,000 in Few Years.

Charles H. Scholle Became Regular and Liberal Newspaper Advertiser Only Six Years Ago.

(By Andrew L. Demling.)

"When you look at that well seasoned old pipe on my desk there, what is the idea it inevitably suggests to your mind?"

"Comfort, peace and thorough satisfaction with things in general," I replied promptly—wondering what possible relation there could be between the question and how to sell furniture.

For I was settled at ease in one of the huge, thickly upholstered chairs in the private office of Charles H. Scholle, the man who has practically built up a $500,000 yearly furniture business in six years.

"Exactly," he replied. "And there you have the foundation secret of our unusually rapid growth—association of ideas."

And he absent mindedly picked up the old pipe and proceeded to fill it, unmistakably disclosing the idea which my reply had suggested to him.

Stunted Advertising—Stunted Success

"You see," he continued, "when my uncle and his partner established this business back in 1872, they adopted what they called a 'conservative' policy."

"They selected what was at that time an excellent location, and stocked a store with the best to be had in furniture."

In accordance with this advertising investment, their success was modest—but it satisfied them, for it was quite in line with their principle of conservatism.

"Well, when my uncle retired, in 1908, and we incorporated the present company, the situation was just about this:

"The location was excellent, and we were selling the best grade of furniture, at consistently legitimate prices, and giving decidedly good service—to a fair number of people."

But—the business was still small.

Evolving the Plan.

"Now there are in practically every town in the country, a number of establishments selling a high grade of furniture at practically the same prices, and giving what they consider good service."

"Yet some of these firms are big—and some remain small. Why?"

"We decided that in order to become prominent in furniture selling, we must identify ourselves with some feature that we could make peculiarly our own."

"Other houses could secure good furniture, and sell it as reasonably as we could."

"We would feature service. We would give our customers always just a little more than they asked, and guarantee them satisfaction at any cost to ourselves."

Exploiting the Idea.

"A good idea. But how to arrive at the point where our name would be identified with it absolutely and for all time—just as your idea of a pipe is peace and enjoyment."

"There is only one possible way—by advertising in the newspapers."

"Well, we didn't let any grass grow under our feet. From that day to this, we would no more think of stinging our advertising than we would of cutting off our perfectly good right hand."

Calling Newspapers Only Effective Medium.

"Do you confine your advertising activity to newspapers, Mr. Scholle?" I asked.

"Most assuredly," he returned. "They're the one effective medium for furniture advertising. It's a thing that can be bought satisfactorily. The newspapers will bring people to the store in big numbers."

Changing Styles Necessitate Constant Advertising.

"How often should furniture be advertised?" I asked.

"We advertise regularly three times a week, in every season," he replied. "But of course there are times and seasons when we have to advertise oftener."

"Furniture styles change every six months—so you see why the successful dealer must keep constantly and everlastingly at it."

Making Good on Advertised Promises

"Of course, one must back up his advertised promises with facts, to gain and retain confidence, the invaluable asset. And one evening last winter we had a very unusual opportunity to do just that."

"One of our chauffeurs phoned that his truck had broken down about twelve miles north of town, loaded with seventeen orders promised for delivery that night as far north as twenty-five miles."

"Well, we phoned all seventeen of our waiting customers right away and toll calls, and explained the situation. Every one of them assured us the next day would do quite as well, and expressed appreciation of our trouble."

"It was a case of making a virtue of necessity, and sparing ourselves an agonizing morning of explanations to justify indignant patrons—and was an exceptional chance to make good on our advertised promises of 'extra service.'"

Realizes $500,000 Annually on $20,000

"So you don't hesitate to say that constant and liberal newspaper advertising is an absolute essential to a big success in furniture selling—and that it pays?" I said, as a stenographer brought him a sheaf of letters to be signed, and I rose to leave.

"You've said it exactly," he replied. "It is an essential to big success. And as for paying—picking up his pen point and selecting it to a doubtful scrutiny, 'well, we invest from $15,000 to $20,000 a year in newspaper advertising, and our resulting sales are $500,000. There's nothings to quarrel about in these figures.'"

WISCONSIN INVASION OF THE WHITE GRUBS

Grub Expected to Cause at Least Five Million in Damages to Wisconsin Farmers.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., May 12.—The invasion of Wisconsin has begun. The enemy is numbered in billions. His toll will not be taken in lives, but in dollars. It is estimated that the losses will be at least $5,000,000.

This army of invasion is composed of white grubs. Prof. J. C. Sanders, chief nursery inspector of the State university, has just returned from a scouting expedition. He reports that the enemy is strongly entrenched and that only the strongest offensive methods will prevent total devastation of some parts of the state. In Grant county, he said he found an average of two grubs to the square foot.

"When it is considered that corn usually is planted in hills three feet apart and in rows an equal distance, giving each hill nine square feet," he said, "it means eighteen of these grubs to a hill. How long a hill will last after the grubs start work depends only on the size of the hill. Its destruction is certain."

Farmers should not use land devoted to sod crops last year for hill crops this year. This is the year of the greatest activity for the three year grub, and if corn, tobacco, potatoes and other hill crops are planted on ground where June bugs laid their eggs last year they will be utterly destroyed. Almost any kind of root is good food for the grubs. They have even known to attack the roots of fruit trees when other food was denied them.

"It is estimated that billions of these grubs are ready to attack crops in the southwestern part of the state. They are found this year in territory where they were never known before. Estimating the corn crop alone as worth $25,000,000 and the loss by grubs at twenty percent—I have found white areas where the damage was forty-seven percent—one can realize the awful damage that can be caused by these grubs. It is possible that in some places there are 100,000 of these grubs to the acre. Crops planted there would have no chance of survival."

Prof. Sanders explained the life history of the grub. He said the eggs were laid early last Spring and the larvae did comparatively little damage. They withstood the winter weather by digging themselves in. This Spring they abandoned their trenches and came to the surface to feed on roots. In the fall they dig themselves in and in the Spring come out for a few days feeding, lapse into the chrysalis stage, and in early Fall develop into beetles. They will remain in the ground until 1917, when they will come forth again and lay their eggs for another crop of grubs.

Government experts have been at work on the grub problem for several years. No means of fighting them successfully has been discovered. Fall plowing crushes a large number, but does not exterminate. The method which can be followed with the greatest degree of success is starvation. This is expensive as it means absolute clearing of large areas.

GOVERNMENT COUNTS BIRD POPULATION

One Hundred and Twenty Sparrows to the Mile—American Birds Too Few.

Sixty pairs of English sparrows to the square mile, or 7 to every 100 native birds, is the average throughout the United States, according to the "preliminary census of birds of the United States," taken under the direction of government biologists. Bird lovers may obtain Bulletin No. 187 which tells about this census, by writing to the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

The census seems to show that the bird most abundantly found in the United States is the robin, with the English sparrow a close second. In the northeastern United States, where the census was most thorough, there were, on an average six pairs of robins to each farm of 58 acres. English sparrows average five pairs per farm. No other bird is anywhere nearly so abundant as either of these, but some are numerous enough to make their total run well into the millions. Taking 100 robins as a unit, other desirable birds were noted in the following proportions:

Catbirds.....	48
House wrens.....	29
Brown thrashers.....	27
Kingbirds.....	27
Bluebirds.....	26

The statistics regarding birds are particularly gratifying. Only a few years ago nearly the whole bluebird population of the eastern United States was destroyed by a severe winter. There are now several million bluebirds in this locality.

As for density of population, on each acre of farm land covered by the census, there was an average of one pair of birds. The record for density comes from Chevy Chase, Md., where 187 pairs were found nesting on 23 acres. Thirty-four species of birds were represented.

While there are no previous official censuses of the federal government that are comparable with this one, several censuses have before been taken by individuals, on more or less limited areas. One census taken in 1901 by a specialist, agrees very closely with the government's census as far as the total number of birds is concerned. It differs, however, regarding the number of English sparrows, showing 106 pairs to the square mile or 18 to every 100 native birds, while the new census, as previously stated, showed only 60 pairs to the square mile or 7 to every 100.

The present bird population is much less than it ought to be, according to the biologists. If birds were given more protection and encouragement there would be an increase in numbers which would be accompanied by a corresponding decrease in the number of insect pests. That breeding birds prefer thickly inhabited centers of population to forests is one of the conclusions of the census. This seems to refute the widespread belief that humans and birds are naturally antagonistic. It also seems probable that as our human population increases, so will our bird population.

The biologists of the department plan to repeat this census for several years and on a larger scale. If bird lovers throughout the land are willing to aid in the work, The department's Biological Survey fur-

ANTI-FLY CAMPAIGN WAGED ON BATTLE LINE.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, May 12.—Files are considered so dangerous a foe that a staff of entomologists have been engaged to inaugurate an anti-fly campaign at the British front. It is feared that the insects will carry the germs of epidemic from the eastern theatre of war to the western unless prompt measures are taken to exterminate the larvae. The army will be ordered to clear up and burn or destroy all rubbish near the camps, which might serve as fly breeders.

SUCCESS LETTERS

Gazette Want Ads a Great Help in a Hurry

A "Success Letter" from a user of want ads on Route 3, Janesville.

WANTED—A man to work on farm by the day. C. H. Howard, both phones. 5-4-15-21.

Janesville, Wis., April 29, 1915.

Janesville Gazette:

I wish to write you of the success I had from advertising in your paper. About a week ago I called up the Gazette in the morning and asked that an ad be inserted for a farm hand to work by the day. Between five and six o'clock I had answered the phone seven times, and hired a man who is still with me and a good man, too. Was away in the evening so do not know how many more called, but during Wednesday and Thursday I had six or seven more calls, so am satisfied that advertising in the Gazette is a great help in a hurry.

Respectfully,

NORMAN HOWARD,

Janesville, Wis., Rte. 3.

Proof That Hens Have Taste. Possibly the best proof that hens and other members of the feathered tribe not only taste but enjoy their food and drink is shown in the way they blink their eyes in drinking, much after the human methods of expressing satisfaction.

We Have For

Sale Three Fine

Farms In

Chippewa County

The county is thickly settled, is on three railroads, and an electric line that runs through from Chippewa Falls to Eau Claire. A great tobacco section. We can sell these farms on a long time payment plan. About all that you need to make a start is a team of horses and some machinery. Write anyway and find out. It is interesting even if you do not want to buy.

BRITISH CRUISER'S EXPLOIT IN CUTTING CABLES BETWEEN TURK PORTS CALLED MOST DARING FEAT IN DARDANELLES FIGHTING

British cruiser Amethyst in Dardanelles.

According to British reports, the most daring exploit that has yet been recorded in the Dardanelles fighting was the dash of the British cruiser Amethyst up the straits to cut the cables between the forts on the European and Asiatic sides of the waterway. This was successfully accomplished despite the fact that the cruiser was subjected to a terrific fire from both sides, to which she replied, using all her guns. One shell struck the vessel near the bows, killing and wounding several men. Other projectiles damaged her steering gear and for a time she was adrift. In the glare of the searchlights from the forts she made a fine target, and it was only the poor gunnery of the Turks that saved her from Davy Jones' locker.

Cossacks Are Most Picturesque Fighters In the World's War

Washington, D. C., May 12.—"Apprenticed to Mars at birth, as were the Spartans before them, the Cossacks, survivors from a young, non-industrial, in-the-spur world are the most picturesque fighters on Europe's battlefields. A frontier folk like the people of our early West, a mixture of many adventurous elements and constituting within their own country a class more distinctive than that of the American cowboy, they have finally been subdued to the needs of the great Imperial government at Petrograd, taken over just as they were into its machinery, and preserved as a soldier-caste. A wild, conquering, freebooting folk, the Cossacks have been brought within the fold of Russian civilization as soldiers, descendants of warriors and progenitors of generations of soldiers to meet the future needs of Slav empire."

"It is with these Cossacks, the men who, in the leisure of national peace, conquered the vast empire of Siberia for Russia, and who, in each Russian war for the last 100 years, have formed the Tsar's irresistible first-line strength, that today's statement of the National Geographic Society deals. More nearly defining this military folk, the statement continues: "The Cossacks are a people of the limitless steppes, a people of close corporation, situated in Russia as a race apart, a soldier-caste, their state a military organization, their connection with the great empire maintained through the Imperial War Department, the administration of their internal affairs practically in their own hands, and their privileges as a caste almost as pronounced as were those of the Spartan soldier-citizen, or more comparable to the soldier-caste of older Indian organization. The Cossacks came of the original Slav stock, but they were those Slavs who never bowed their heads beneath a yoke foreign or domestic, who lived a free life on the borders of their race's civilization; wandering, fighting, buccaners, they were a people who penetrated deeply into Tartar and Georgian lands, who lived by the hunt and by plunder, and who maintained themselves on the borders of Asia and Europe."

"These sturdy Russian wanderers assimilated many adventurous elements, took up among them many Tartars and Slavs, and so, today the Cossack type is a more or less distinct one. The total Cossack population of Russia is more than 3,000,000. Some years ago, they owned nearly 145,000 acres of land, of which 105,000,000 was arable, and 40,000 forest land. This land is held by the Cossacks in community partition as a State reward for their military service. It will be seen that the Cossack holdings amount to about 50 acres for each man, woman and child of the people. There is an admiring, half envious Russian catchword about being as 'free and as rich as a Cossack.'"

"The Cossacks are the rough riders of Europe. As the cowboys of the American plains and the gauchos of the Pampas, the Cossacks are an intensely interesting, wild, free, plain folk, who live in the saddle in the open places, and whose rough democracy as the expression of the same native, rudimentary culture as that of their New World brethren. None of their members are allowed to starve, and none of them have succeeded in winning overmastering position through the laying up of great wealth."

"The Cossack is favored by the State, and is a main prop of the State's authority. To be born a Cossack is to be born a soldier. Every Cossack bears the obligation of twenty years military service. He enters into this service at the age of 18; spends 3 years in a preliminary Cossack division; next passes 12 years in active service, and spends his last 5 military years in the Cossack reserve. It is the picked men from his ranks who constitute the Imperial Guard, a body of the finest type of fighters, whom the Tsar can trust no one else around him. These Cossack soldiers have been the greatest terror with which Russia has been able to threaten Europe; they have been the empire's most efficient internal police, and they have marched eastward to the Pacific and southward to the zones of British influence, conquering for the Tsar a vast domain including many nations. The Cossacks have dearly avenged their fellow Slavs for the hardships they have received at the hands of the Tartar hordes of Asia."

SAYS ENGLAND OWES DEBT TO AMERICANS

Harry Britain Extols Work of Yankee Commission in the War Raging in Europe.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

New York, May 12.—At a recent meeting of the Society of Pilgrims, in New York City, Harry B. V. Britain, one of the founders of the society and chairman of the London branch, made a speech in which he extolled the services of America in the great war raging in Europe, which, in the work of Belgian relief won the war's greatest victory and was a triumph of neutrality.

"We have appreciated the magnificent way in which America, without the need of any appeal, has come forward to help in every way the sick and suffering in Europe," said Mr. Britain. "As individuals, in groups, and as a nation you have put us under a debt of gratitude we can never repay. In ways far too numerous to detail we are your debtors, but what has more than all else touched our hearts is your philanthropy in feeding the Belgian people. It has fallen to my lot to see a great deal of the working of The Commission for Relief, and the remarkable efficiency of what has been done has filled me with admiration."

"Consider for a moment what this commission has done. A handful of Americans, with no previous experience of this kind of work, is feeding 10,000,000 people—7,000,000 Belgians and 3,000,000 French. In other words, with no hope of reward save the intricate thanks of a nation daily in danger of starvation, your countrymen in England and Belgium, backed, of course, by yourselves, have tackled a job bigger than that which confronts the commissariat of any army in Europe. And it is the privilege of every Britisher to tell you you have stepped in where war prevented us from going.

For no other reason, for this alone the neutrality of the United States should be welcomed by every one of my fellow-countrymen. Through your neutrality you have been able to accomplish the greatest feat of the war. The Commission has become the one power—the really one neutral power—respected by all nations. It was organized by Americans, and if anyone ever says that the neutrality of the United States in the greatest of all wars was merely passive circumspection, history will hail him up as a liar and ding in his face an achievement that General Grant or General Lee would have admitted to be more to their credit than any of the many victories they have gained by strategic genius.

Do not think because we say these things we are not grateful. We know at home in England that to The American Commission for Relief in Belgium we owe the safety and the lives of the bulk of the Belgian nation. Our Government takes the personal word of honor of your fellow-countrymen, Mr. Hoover, as an international guarantee of a war which has no precedent and no parallel in the history of peace or war. On the pledge of one American we have allowed to go into Belgium millions of dollars of our money, and would be of priceless military and other value to the Germans, who occupy the country. Mr. Hoover, in the name of the Commission, tells us this we only go to the Belgians. We take his word, and have no reason to regret it."
